What is the CFCC?

The California Financing Coordinating Committee (CFCC) was formed in 1998 to facilitate and expedite the completion of infrastructure projects by helping interested parties identify and combine the resources of various state and federal financing sources. The CFCC has eight members: five state, three federal. CFCC members share project information so additional resources can be identified. Funding from CFCC members may be in the form of grants or loans. Members conduct statewide training each year to educate interested parties about the CFCC and the financial and technical resources available.

Purpose of Funding Fairs

CFCC funding fairs provide members of the public and infrastructure development professionals current information on funding options available for different project types. Interested parties attending a funding fair receive a CFCC handbook and informational handouts describing available financial and technical assistance. The handbook includes CFCC member contact information, project matrices showing funding sources by project type, and copies of all the PowerPoint presentations given by members. Attendees of a funding fair can network with persons experienced with similar projects and the CFCC members. CFCC funding fairs are free.

Who should attend?

Public works and local government representatives including city managers and planners, economic development and engineering professionals, officials from privately owned facilities, financial advisors and project consultants.

2011 Funding Fair Partners

CFCC is pleased to acknowledge and thank the California Rural Water Association for providing morning refreshments at the 2011 Funding Fairs in Alhambra, Arcata, and Truckee; the City of Visalia, the County of Tulare, and Self-Help Enterprises for providing morning refreshments and conference room accommodations at the Visalia Funding Fair location; and the Rural Community Assistance Corporation for handling the 2011 Funding Fair registration process.

What happens at a Funding Fair ?

The morning of each funding fair is spent listening to presentations from each of the different funding agencies. Agency staff will describe funding programs available for different types of projects and the application process for accessing the funds. Participants may ask questions of staff during the presentations. In the afternoon, participants can sit down "one-on-one" with each of the different funding agencies to review any proposed projects. The project can be evaluated and direction given as to availability of funding and steps needed to submit an application. By providing this direct technical assistance around the state, the CFCC hopes to encourage project developers, large or small, to discuss proposals with CFCC staff.

Examples of CFCC Projects

BEFORE

AFTER

City of Calabasas: The Las Virgenes Creek Restoration Project restored and enhanced 400 feet of concrete channel transforming the area into a riparian zone that functions as a migration corridor for local wildlife. The restoration efforts also benefit local businesses by protecting the existing infrastructure and maintaining the current flood control levels in the area.

AFTER

County Sanitation Districts of Los Angeles County: The Joint Water Pollution Control Plant Marshland Enhancement Project restored 17 acres of marshland in the Bixby Slough. The restoration efforts improved water quality, as well as provided open viewing space and educational opportunities.

AFTER

Example of Economic Development Infrastructure: Public Infrastructure in support of a retail shopping center. Auburn Plaza created 66 new full time jobs as of December 2010. I-Bank and the Department of Housing and Community Development funded infrastructure on Highway 49 in Placer County for the Auburn Plaza.
